To whom it may concern,

Milad suffers suffers from Stage B Leukemia. He also has has anemia and low Hb that are indicated by his test results.

The typical treatment for Leukemia involves a remission induction phase, an intensification phase, and continuation phase.

It is important that Milad, at this stage, undergo chemotherapy directed to the central nervous system to prevent possible relapses.

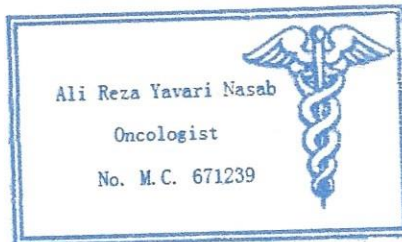

This type of cancer usually gets worse quickly and be life threatening if it is not treated with appropriate care.

He will be spending the majority of his time in hospital in the next few months. His memory will be strongly impacted as well as his ability to function on a day-to-day basis.

He will be taking oncovin based medication.

It is potentially life threatening for him to engage in anything but his health for the time being, unless instructed otherwise.
