There is at least one of those in WV. Can't remember the name, but I stopped for a soda when running around near Charleston a few years back. Kind of was like a Highs with guns.

let me know how it turns out.

Here's the response I got from FFLtrust.com. I asked him why his business picture doesn't match what google earth shows is at that location, which is the DMV and the country sheriff's office. 😊 here's his response.

"First, we are not affiliated with FFL123.com. Second, the address on the site is my HOME. The address of the building is listed right next to it. Third, if your attempt it to blackmail / extort / slander / defame our company, rest assure I WILL TAKE APPROPRIATE LEGAL ACTION.

Regards
Henry"

Check out both websites, they are the same company. Somethings odd.

There's a liquor and gun shop here in St. Mary's county. Its a gas station, too. Good beer selection.

Just for the record....the owner of that site sent us a threatening email to remove the links and to cease and desist this discussion.

Fvck if I would ever consider using that service.

From what I gather from this thread, his service is actually worth it if one wants to get into the FFL business and doesn't know where to start.

Why would the owner of that site turn down free advertising ON A GUN SITE?

Sheesh, sounds like he's the guy that complained to A1 a few days ago about not responding to e-mails quickly enough. Sheesh. 🙄 🙄

People get butthurt over anything that can even remotely be a question about their company. How they handle the situation is another story entirely.

Is FFL123 a joke?

They now have a second web site business called "FFLTrust.com" that is the exact same site, with the same pics of the product. When I e-mailed FFL123 and asked about this, here's the exact response I received"

"They are try to steal my content, sorry for the confusion."

yeah, sounds like someone from Nigeria is answering their e-mail.

FFLtrust has a nice pic of their HQ, but google earth shows the neighborhood is actually county buildings.

FFL123 has a nice pic of their HQ with signage, but google earth shows the buildings have no signs on them.

There's an old Italian saying, "if the head of the fish stinks, the whole fish stinks" just that they would have ANY deception tells me they are not trustworthy.

BUT

if anyone here has real world dealings with them, I would like to know if after a few years of having your FFL if you have faced any problems having used this company to attain it.

Thanks.

I used them to get my FFL. I can't complain. They gave me a comfort of knowing the process with a few extra pointers. I think it was worth it. But it is just my opinion.

I'm equally confused as others. Real discussion on whether or not the site is legit; mostly "yays," and this guy complains?

Maybe he's been battered by too many lefties and it's left him sensitive. 🙄

The guy sent this to our server host knowing full well that the server company would pressure the site owner to remove it.

I read that blurb in the voice of the message I got from the 'IRS' stating a lawsuit would be filed against me.

The definatly appear to be different companies. One is based in TX, the other in SD.

To Henry: your idiotic cease and desist bs is doing more harm to your company then anything that has been discussed in this thread. Stop being a douche, it just gives people a reason NOT to support your company.

I just got it straight in my head.

ffl123.com's owner is Brandon L. Maddox ffltrust.com's owner is Henry Jackson and the nastygram is from ffltrust.com/Henry.

Well, alrighty then. I've been thinking about doing this as well. Have a business game plan. Some info here is definitely good to know.

What's worse is, I was thinking of using his products. I also know full well that all the info is on the ATF website.

This isn't source code to the JSF. Thanks Norton! No way I'd choose him over MDS.

I'll walk it back a bit then.

Thanks for clarifying. One thing about MDS ownership, they love ALL rights, even though they own the forum and the content.
